by Tara Rosenberg, Co-Editor

Picture this: it's homecoming week, and all of the organizations are busy painting banners for the banner contest. Football players prepare for the big game, and cheerleaders make last-minute changes to the season's mega pep rally. The tents for the homecoming day cookout are placed in the Grove while homecoming maids practice walking the field in preparation for the halftime ceremony. The homecoming parade makes its way through campus, and students, faculty, and staff line the streets to take part in the great homecoming spirit. Does this mean anything to you? Of course it does; they are homecoming activities. They are more than just homecoming activities though; they are traditions.

Homecoming is not the only tradition at Holmes CC. The entire experience at Holmes is filled with the joy of traditions such as the Holmes Connection! and Spring Fling. All traditions give the school its name and play an important role in unity of the institution.

Traditions at Holmes Community College began in 1925, the year the institution began offering college-level courses. These traditions, though partially changed over the years, include more than just homecoming festivities. Just think of dorm life at Holmes: holding cookouts in the Attala Hall courtyard; using a stack of pennies to lock guys in their room; driving practically 10 feet from Yazoo Hall to McDaniel for class; selling cheese for Phi Theta Kappa; due to procrastination, deciding to pull an allnighter before a big test even though the library closes at 9:30 p.m. and studying in the dorm is virtually impossible; and while in the cafeteria, asking a friend to get you another plate of food because only two trips through the line are allowed, and you have already exceeded that limit. All of the above mentioned activities are traditions held by many Holmes dorm students. Some of the traditions may sound quite strange to people who have not experienced the Holmes dorm life. The same thing can be said about traditions at many four-year universities; those outside of the school just do not understand. That is what's so great about traditions; they are all unique.

“Traditions, however, help shape the college's personality and reputation”

Traditions, however, help shape the college's personality and reputation. Ole Miss' Hotty Toddy and Mississippi State's cowbells are just two examples of traditions at universities. Ole Miss fans might not understand the point to having cowbells at athletic events, and Mississippi State fans may not know the full meaning of Hotty Toddy. While such traditions can evolve, schools stand firm in their beginnings and use traditions to unite their supporters. It is all an effort to build a strong foundation and make known the name of such fine schools as Holmes Community College.

T TRANSITIONS

by Liz Tucker

What do you think of when you hear the word transition? After asking several students and faculty the same question, many of them gave the answer, "Change."

Yes, transition is all about change. Take technology for example; the big thing now is the use or cell phones.

Everywhere you look, someone has a cell phone by their side or up to their ear. Just a few years ago, people did not have the luxury of cell phones. We think, "How did they ever make it?" They say, "We just didn't know any different."

Some changes affect a broad spectrum of people; others are more individual.

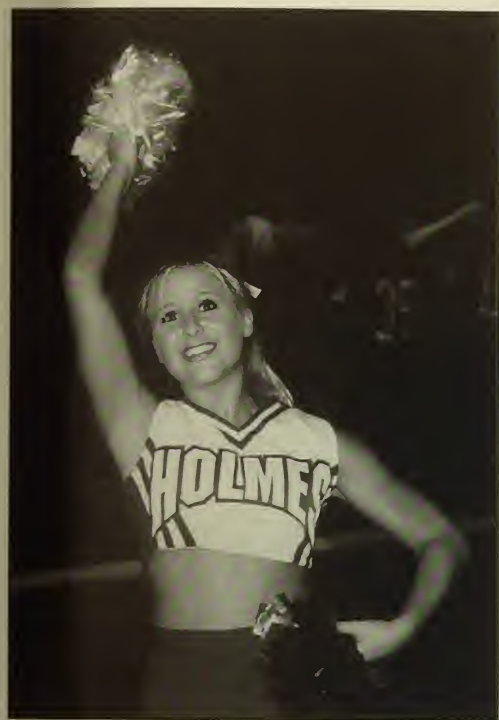

There is also a personal transition. A personal transition would be going from high school to college. Do you think that college tends to change people? One student answered this question by saying that college does not change a person. Another said that it does but in a good way. "It shows them the beginning of adult life with living on their own." Living on your own is a big transition from living with parents. With no parents around to tell you what to do, you are fully responsible for your actions. I asked a teacher if she could see a change in a student's personality without knowing the student before college. The teacher said, "Yes, a lot of the time the student is trying too hard or going to the extreme." Not all transitions affect people in the same way or at the same time. Also, who says transitions have to affect everyone? →

is all about change.”

T RANSITIONS

The majority, however, is affected, either directly or indirectly, by transitions. What matters is how people adapt to the changes that numerous and powerfully come during the college years.

The faculty and staff at Holmes help make college a positive transition for students. They are very understanding and are always willing to help. Dean Boggan states, "College is a critical era for them (students). Some of us have families, and a formal education is not an option so they need to take advantage of their college years. At college, there is a vast difference in independence. No longer do you have parents that tell you what to do. Be sure you have self discipline, and make the right decisions to study and do well in college."

Life definitely changes for students in college. They make new friends that will last a lifetime.

Students mature and become responsible adults, and at the same time, receive an education that will mold their future. The transition from living with family to living on their own is a huge step, but most students will tell you that it was well worth it. Sophomore Emily Ard made the comment, "Everything changes when you get to college. Know who you are before you go, set your standards, and you should not have any problems."

Students will go through many transitions and will make many new traditions while in college. These changes will positively affect life long after leaving college.

TRADITIONS & TRANSITIONS

by Linda Howell

Traditions and transitions are an important part of the college experience. During this time in our lives, we are faced with many traditions that we can accept or decline. We also have to make adjustments as we go through the transition from high school to college.

When students hear the word tradition, immediately they think of a habit or something that they have always done. Studying late at night and not making the bed in the morning before class are just two traditions students often bring with them to college.

District Librarian Kaye Boggan states, "Speaking in terms of a community college, transitions can be seen as a bridge that we cross into our next phase of life, whether it be the workforce or a senior college."

Some of us also have to make the transition from living at home to living in the dorm. Some students believe that college, in general, as well as living in the dorm makes us more responsible. We become aware of the fact that we cannot depend on our parents as much.

Several sophomores agree that living on campus has made them appreciate home more. Sophomore, Michael Summerlin states that after living in the dorm, he understands the importance of personal responsibility. He continues to say that he has learned the valuable lesson that what he does today affects tomorrow and the rest of his life.

What comes to mind when you think of college? The word tradition is often the answer to this question. This is because traditions are spread throughout college life. At Holmes Community College several traditions stick in my mind: homecoming, the bridge (which is not a school-related activity), the cafeteria, and procrastination of writing→ a paper or studying. Face it; every college student has done it. Other traditions include making new friends and meeting different types of people. College is a foundation for building friendships and relationships, as well as for learning how to live and interact with people. Through classes and dorm life, lifelong friendships magically form.

Traditions often withstand transitions as they evolve over the course of time. For sophomore Nicole Lollar, the tradition of racing for the shower in the morning has ended by living in

by Amber Carter, Assistant Editor

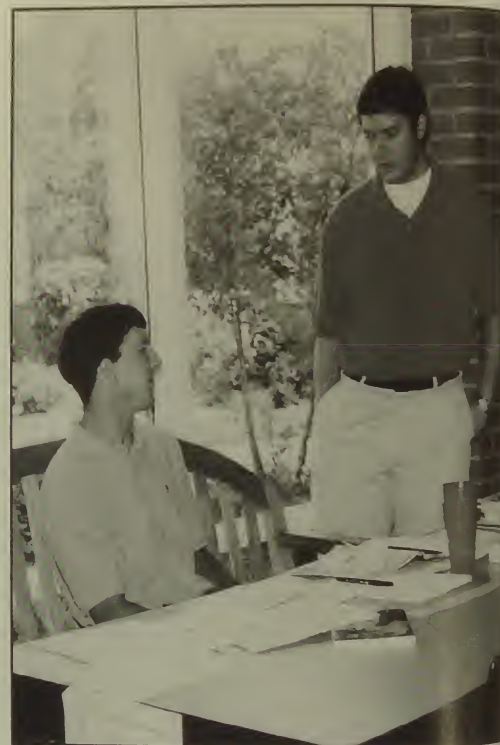

Through the years at Holmes Community College, there have been many different traditions adopted by students, faculty, and staff. Students enjoy traditions like Spring Fling, homecoming festivities, and athletic events. Teachers take a different approach when talking about traditions. The Dean of Academics, Luther Boggan, states, "My favorite tradition at Holmes is that we still put out a good product for our students. The students get a good education, and they indicate it was the best years of their lives."

When entering college, students make new traditions as well as bring old ones with them. Students seem to be more attentive in class because the classes are interesting. They learn to occupy their time in a more mature and responsible way.

Julie McCool, a sophomore from Eupora, says that she makes sure all of her work is done because parents and teachers are not there to tell her what to do. She says, "It's up to me to be successful in college."

Beginning college is also a major transition for students. They have to learn to adapt to living on their own and being more self-reliant. Students learn to value their time and families more than ever before. Karen Shurden, a sophomore from Ackerman, mentioned that the biggest transition for her was becoming more patient and understanding with people. She says, "We have to actually put forth the effort to meet people and make friends." Another transition for students is the way they present themselves and the manner in which they behave. Students are responsible for their actions and how people see them.

DEDICATION

In his 31 years with Holmes Community College, Jack Holmes has served with loyalty and dedication in a number of different capacities. However, his ties to the school go back even further. As a student at Holmes, the Sallis native was a member of the state championship baseball team and was also quarterback for the football team. His athletic achievements earned him membership in the H Club.

After completing his studies at Holmes, he transferred to Delta State University, where he received a bachelor's degree. He also earned a master's degree from Mississippi State University.

He returned to Holmes in 1971 as supervisor for the Kosciusko Skill Center. He was named assistant director of vocational-technical education on the Goodman Campus in 1983. In 1985, he was appointed executive director of the Grenada Center. In 1995, his title was changed to vice president of the Grenada Center.

He and his wife Margaret reside in Kosciusko. They have four children, Kim, Kirk, Keith and Scott.

It is for his service and commitment to the college, especially as a steadfast champion of the Grenada Center, that this, the 73rd edition of Horizons, is dedicated to Jack Holmes.

MORGAN LEADS HOLMES THROUGH TRANSITIONS WHILE MAINTAINING TRADITIONS

by Tara Rosenberg, Co-Editor

Under the leadership of its president, Dr. Starkey A. Morgan Sr., Holmes Community College experienced a 7.4 percent increase in enrollment along with numerous transitions in academics, facilities and student life across its tri-campus.

Academics were boosted with the addition of the new honors program offered on the Goodman and Ridgeland Campuses. The program includes honors classes in several different subject areas. This transition in learning was successful in meeting students where they were and encouraging deeper thinking through creativity and an ever-increasing knowledge and understanding.

More than ever, students were offered "activities galore." In addition to the traditional activities held on the campuses—Fall Fest, Beauty Review and Homecoming—there were many transitions in student activities on the Goodman Campus. Coach Ed Rigby coordinated more intramural sports, including volleyball and tennis. The Creative Arts Club also offered the popular Holmes Coffeehouse not once, but twice each semester. The fitness center, open to all students free of charge, operated with hours more suitable to the lives of college students.

In the fall, the Ridgeland Campus opened its media center. In its 11,000 square feet, students could access not only a wide selection of books and magazines but also the Internet through the many computers. This building represented a transition from traditional libraries to a super-highway of information—all at the students' fingertips.

The Grenada Center dedicated the Forum to Lyle and

The facility was built in 1990, but the interior did not meet the demands of the growing school. Thanks to many generous contributors like the Coreys, dividers for the building made it possible for the auditorium to also be used for the much-needed classroom space.

On the Goodman Campus, construction on the new chapel is continued at a rapid pace. The steeple, now visible across campus, serves as a landmark for the school. This addition to Holmes will give students a physical place to help develop their spiritual lives and may serve as the site for many future Holmes alumni weddings.

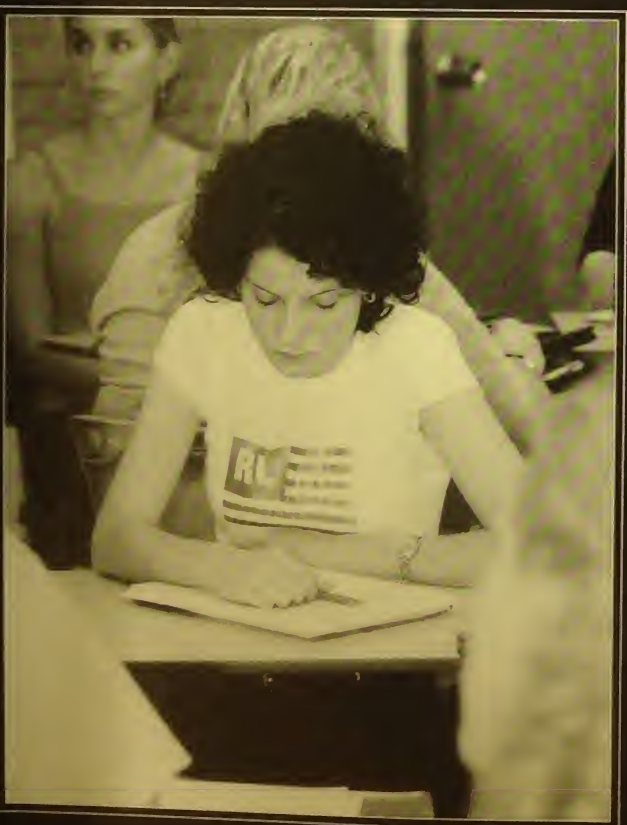

On the day before the beginning of classes on the Goodman Campus, girls flooded into the bright rooms of Choctaw Hall. They were eager to be the first occupants of this new dorm. Choctaw served as a comfortable, yet stylish place for nearly 60 female students on the Goodman Campus. Webster Hall, the new guys' dorm, was still under construction, but it was destined to be just as cozy as its sister hall.

Holmes Community College constantly strove to create an environment of increased academic rigor, facilities and student activities.

Academic and vocational-technical classes at Holmes Community College have experienced major changes over the years.

Even though so much was different from the way it used to be, many of the basic principles were still the same. Ideas and techniques that have stood the test of time were coupled with the needs of today to produce a well-structured curriculum of academic and vo-tech programs.

"Teachers still try to challenge all students no matter at what level they are coming into their class," stated Dr. Howard Butler, Goodman Campus history professor. "You still have your smart-alecks and basic ingredients to class - lecture and notes."

Teachers plunged into each semester with a common, unchanging goal—to prepare students for the university level and their careers.

The vocational-technical department has experienced change across the spectrum. In the early 70s, only vocational classes were offered. There was little emphasis on academics—no ACT requirement and no mandatory academic classes.

"At one time, people who failed in academics were sent to vocational school," said Dwight Myrick, director of vocational-technical education on the Goodman Campus. "That's not the case, now. Skills in reading, math, comprehension, computers, and communication are all essential to excel in vo-tech fields."

Technical field students were required to take the same academic core classes as anyone else; there was no escape from the necessity of academics.

With the addition of many technical programs, engineering technology, air-conditioning and refrigeration, collision repair, business and office technology-came the transition from an "alternative to academics" to an area requiring skill in academics and hands-on work.

The automotive program, once vocational, was changed to automotive technology.

"People are no longer mechanics; they're automotive technicians," said Myrick. "The automotive industry experiences change every day—different sizes, systems, makes, models, computers. This technology is constantly changing, and we have to keep up with it."

Academic standards at Holmes were continually climbing with more and more emphasis on this important area. For some students, this quest for knowledge begins at the developmental level.

With classes added to this program over the years, its purpose was to bring students with underdeveloped academic skills up to the pre-college level.

Advances in technology have played an important role in classes at Holmes.

Some teachers now use the Internet in their classes to post homework, announcements, and grades—a variety of uses.

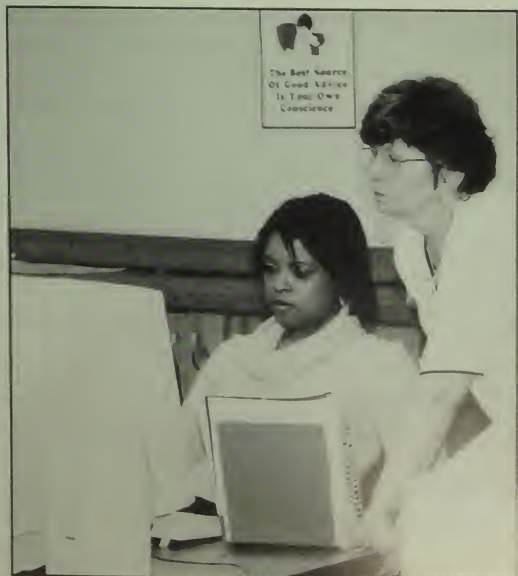

Rosalynne Davis, biological sciences instructor on the Goodman Campus, used specific websites to aid in laboratory exercises, including tests and identification of material.

Not very long ago, Holmes did not even offer any of the computer classes that are now required courses.

Data processing was offered in the place of computer technology and courses such as farm machinery became obsolete.

STUDENTS CONQUER THE MAJOR DECISION

"What do you want to be when you grow up?" This was a familiar question everyone had been asked. Whether the answer was a veterinarian, a police officer, or an astronaut, anything was possible. As students began college, the question still remained. However, it was usually phrased differently. "What is your major?" was the often-asked question.

The process of choosing a major could be a difficult task for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and even seniors. One of the hardest decisions a student had to make was where he or she would like to end up after college. There were many students at this college alone who struggled with the very same problem.

There were several factors involved when considering a major: salary, a person's interests, and the extra years associated with obtaining that certain degree.

Goodman Campus Counselor Linda Alexander suggested, "Identify your strengths and weaknesses, both academic and personal. Be realistic. Know your personality type! If it does not match the career for which you are striving, misery awaits you.”

Also, many things influenced a student’s decision when choosing a major, such as family, friends, educational background and lifestyles.

Alisha May, a freshman elementary education major from Eupora, stated that her experience while babysitting was the stimulus for her career decision.

Teachers and classes can have a great impact on students and their career choices.

Goodman Campus Counselor Janice Richardson said, “Teachers have wonderful, unique situations in which to enlighten and encourage students along their career journey.”

Holmes was fortunate to have faculty members that were dedicated and available to help students make “major” decisions.

“Whenever I came up with a new idea to do for school, they helped me see it through,” said Bill Michaels, a sophomore computer and electrical engineering major from Yazoo City.

For those who were unsure of a major or wanted to change their major, several resources were available to help them make the right career choice.

Bobbie Rigby, a sophomore accounting major from West, said that hands-on experience and observation of a career choice would help on the decision. Also, here at Holmes was a great Career Center, which offered different options for research on any major.

“Choices CT, Skills Assessment Test, occupation briefs, videos, and many others are available for all students,” said Sherry Anders, administrative assistant with Student Support Services.

Whether it’s researching a career, choosing a major or changing a major, career choices were out there for every interest and personality.

Over the years, some of the best things about college are taking naps, graduation, and going on field trips.

Although many classes at Holmes do not always have the opportunity to take a trip, those that have, come back with a memorable experience.

Field trips are not about missing class with an excuse; academic purposes are involved. Field trips give individuals the chance to see first-hand how his or her studies pertain to real life experiences.

During the 2001-2002 school year, some of the student body at Holmes Community College had some of these experiences.

One of the newest classes offered at Holmes is Honors Forum. This class had the chance to take a trip to Jackson and see the Majesty of Spain exhibit.

The Ridgeland Campus students from the honors program also attended the trip. This field trip reinforced what they had previously learned in class.

Honors Program Director Janet Simpson explained how Honors Forum works along with Phi Theta Kappa and its topic "Customs, Traditions, and Celebrations: The Human Drive for Community."

Beginning in the fall, students got a first hand view of a Bulldog tradition in transition with the first ever honors classes offered at Holmes Community College. The Honors Program was instituted on the Goodman and Ridgeland Campuses.

Goodman Campus faculty member Janet Simpson, director of the Honors Program, said that she is excited the program is growing and hopes that it will continue doing well.

A variety of honors courses were offered to allow students to take a different approach to learning. These classes were designed to be more specialized to the student.

According to Goodman Campus student Jeffrey Ingram, "Honors classes are so small that it relies more on class participation. In my Honors English Literature II class, I am able to give my own interpretation as to what a writer means."

"My honors English class is more personal and intimate and I got to know my fellow students better," remarked Audrey Philliber, a freshman student on the Goodman Campus.

Not only did the honor courses teach students on a more personal basis and allow them to participate in class more freely but they included more extracurricular activities such as field trips.

Goodman Campus instructor Steve Deaton taught honors English Composition I and II.

He said he enjoys getting to know the students better and he likes the fact that they have more control in class.

The Holmes Community College Honors Program offered students a nontraditional approach to education.

The honors program students participate in the Spanish Dance class held in November in the Fine Arts Auditorium. This event was sponsored by the Kappa Alpha chapter of Phi Theta Kappa during their studies of various cultures.

A program held each year to honor an outstanding faculty member and an outstanding student, HEADWAE, Higher Education Appreciation Day - Working for Academic Excellence, was founded by state representative Cecil Simmons. Holmes Community College has participated in the HEADWAE program for 15 years. HEADWAE was sponsored by the state's corporate community and coordinated by the Mississippi Association of Colleges. This year the two Holmes Community College representatives were faculty member Janet Simpson and student Tara Rosenberg.

Music instructor Janet Simpson teaches music appreciation, piano, and music theory on the Goodman Campus. She is also director of the Honors Program.

After graduating Holmes, she enrolled at Mississippi State University, where she earned both a bachelor's degree and a master's degree. Simpson felt motivated by receiving this recognition.

"This honor motivates me to better my skills and inspire students. I appreciate this effort to reward educators who meet the future face to face in the classroom everyday," said Simpson.

She and her husband, Richard, reside in Kosciusko. They have two children and one grandchild.

Student representative Tara Rosenberg maintained a 4.0 grade point average as a pre-med major on the Goodman Campus. Highly active at Holmes, Rosenberg served as vice president of scholarship for the Kappa Alpha chapter of Phi Theta Kappa and as co-editor of "Horizons." In addition, Rosenberg participated in the BSU and she was on the ministerial team. She was also a tutor for Student Support Services and on the academic bowl team. A recipient of the Samuel Massey Medical Scholarship and a Board of Trustees Scholarship, she was named to the National Dean's List.

"I know there are many students who excel in academics who deserve this award. I am honored that they chose me," said Rosenberg.

RIDGELAND, GRENADA LIBRARIANS HONORED WITH LAMPLIGHTER INVITATIONS

by Liz Tucker

Deb Switzer

Two Holmes Community College staff members, Deb Switzer and Joan Tierce, attended the Lamplighters Conference, held annually to honor faculty members. In order to be selected, a person has to meet two qualifications: they must have taught at Holmes Community College for at least five years and it must have been their first time to attend the conference. This was Holmes' 10th year to participate in the conference.

The Ridgeland Campus librarian, Deb Switzer has been with Holmes Community College for 13 years. Growing up with a father in the United States Air Force, Switzer's life was filled with travel, but she decided to settle in Mississippi. Switzer earned an associate's degree from Gulf Coast Community College and her bachelor's degree from Mississippi University for Women. In addition, Switzer earned a master's degree in library science from the University of Mississippi.

The Grenada Center librarian, Joan Tierce also represented Holmes Community College at the Lamplighters Conference. After graduating from Holmes in 1979, she earned a bachelor's degree from Delta State University. Tierce received a master's degree in library science from the University of Mississippi in 1984. PTK NOMINATES FIVE FOR ALL-STATE ACADEMIC TEAM

by Andrienne Stiff

Five students from Holmes were selected to represent the college as members of the 2001 Mississippi All-State Academic Team. This was sponsored by Phi Theta Kappa International Honor Society, the Mississippi Association of Community and Junior Colleges, and "The Clarion Ledger."

Phi Theta Kappa is the honor society for two-year colleges, with the international headquarters located in Jackson.

Each Phi Theta Kappa chapter in the state chooses two of its members to represent them on the All-State Academic Team. The selection process is based on the students' scholastic achievements, community involvement, leadership capabilities and college service activities. The judges choose 10 students as members of the first team based on their application, an essay written by the student and recommendations from faculty members.

HOLMES' BRIGHTEST PARTICIPATE IN GAME OF WITS

by Tara Rosenberg, Co-Editor

Each year at the University of Mississippi, community colleges from across the state gather to compete in the Ken Wooten Scholars Bowl.

Begun as a recruiting tool for the university, this competition has become not just a mere measure of how much a team knows, but it shows how well people perform under pressure, how they work as a team, and how well-rounded they are in their areas of study.

Some teams begin practice with the start of the fall semester in preparation for this event, making sure that each person is quick to think and fast on the buzzer. It takes practice to function effectively as a quick-witted team.

Since the inception of the Scholars Bowl, Holmes Community College's Goodman Campus team and Ridgeland Campus team have each brought home the first place trophy one time.

Members of the first, second and third place teams receive scholarships to the University of Mississippi. At the 2002 competition, Ryan Burns, a Ridgeland Campus scholars bowl team member, received a scholarship to the university by answering a large number of toss-up questions.

Holmes was able to compete in the Ken Wooten Scholars Bowl because of the work and visions of advisers Maria Edwards and Lindy McCain on the Goodman Campus and advisers Rus Bishop and John Switzer on the Ridgeland Campus.

NATIONAL TRAGEDY OPENS EYES

SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

BY DAN TOWNSEND

September 11, 2001, was eulogized by country music singer Alan Jackson as "the day the world stopped turning." Early on that Tuesday morning, airplanes were hijacked by terrorists and flown into both of the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center. This was followed by a hijacked plane being crashed in Pennsylvania, as well as another plane being crashed into the Pentagon.

Thousands lost their lives and thousands of others suffered the loss of close friends and family members. Soon after the attacks, President George W. Bush announced that the U.S. would make it their goal to end terrorism and that he was willing to do whatever it might take to ensure that such attacks would never occur again. Soon after this, the U.S. began systematically lowering bombs in the Afghanistan area as part of the first phase of what Bush calls "the war on terrorism."

September 11 has become a day that evoked strong emotion in most people whenever it was mentioned. This was a day on which the best and worst of human nature was revealed. America saw the sickening and terrifying things that human hatred and pride can result in. While some cheered the disaster with sadistic satisfaction, others risked and even lost their lives attempting to save others from the disaster. Fearless New York City firefighters put their lives on the line to rescue those perishing.

Even though several months have passed since the attack, the threat of terrorism hasn't faded away. Some students believed that though people are living with a little more caution than before, for the most part, life has gone back to normal in our community.

Goodman sophomore Chris Davis said, "More than anything, the attack has made people a lot more cautious. I think most of the strong patriotic feelings that were felt initially have kind of faded. I don't think many people around here have made any long-term priority changes.

The part that stuck in my mind the most and had the biggest impact on me was seeing people throw themselves out of their windows to escape the burning building."

Bre Davis, a sophomore on the Goodman Campus, said, "My first reaction was complete shock and disbelief. I wanted to wake up the next morning and find that it had just been a dream. People on campus really came together by getting involved in relief efforts, such as fundraisers and blood drives. The first few weeks after the attacks, there was a lot of emphasis on uniting as a nation, but since the initial shock has worn off, it's become secondary to most people and not something that people are pre-occupied with as much."

I immediately following the attacks, students noticed somewhat of a renewed interest in spiritual matters. Goodman freshman Ben Terry said, "I thought the attacks would turn America back to Christianity, but I'm afraid that's not going to happen. I do think people value their families a lot more than before."

The greater sense of value and respect for human life is a feeling that most students have in common.

Audrey Philliber, a freshman on the Goodman Campus, said, "The attacks have brought us together and made us more of a community. People were willing to help each other because there was a greater sense of community."

Even though the attacks were actually carried out several thousand miles away from here, they had a tremendous effect on people right in our own community.

Virginia Dernick, an English instructor on the Goodman Campus, said, "I think the attacks have made people more serious-minded and solemn and people are taking life more seriously than before. Two of the men that died on September 11 were former students of mine, and that made it seem very personal to me. I think the United States has done well handling the situation so far; we've been very selective and tried to be very specific with our mission."

Franklin Roosevelt described the day the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor as "a day that would live in infamy," and this certainly appears to be an adequate description of September 11, 2001, as well. The images are forever fixed in the minds of Americans and the aftermath of it all will be felt for years and years to come.

Perhaps the most valuable truth that was brought out by these attacks was that life is a very fragile thing and ought not be taken for granted.

WHAT WAS YOUR REACTION WHEN YOU FIRST HEARD

"I was shocked! It made me so sad to know that there were people in this world that could be so cruel. But I am excited to see how America has joined together to help one another!"

HOLMES REMEMBERS TWO OF ITS OWN

by Amber Carter

The terrorist act of September 11, 2001, had a profound impact on the students at Holmes Community College. We take a moment to remember two former alumni, Lt. Col. Jerry Don Dickerson and James Joe Ferguson.

Jerry Don Dickerson grew up in Yazoo County and later moved to Durant after his sophomore year in high school. After graduating from high school, Dickerson enrolled into the National Guard in Oklahoma. Dickerson then found himself at Holmes Community College on the Goodman Campus where he graduated with honors.

After Holmes he attended Mississippi State University. Dickerson held the position of the research analyst with the army at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. In his last assignment, he served as assistant executive for the Deputy Chief of Staff for Programs.

Dickerson leaves behind his wife, Page, a daughter, Beth, 14, and a son, Will, 11. He also leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hicks of Bentonla, and several brothers and sisters. On December 7, 2001, the Red Auditorium on the campus of the Army Logistic Management College on the Base at Fort Lee was renamed in honor of Lt. Col. Dickerson.

James Joe Ferguson grew up in Durant and graduated from Durant High School. After graduation, Ferguson enrolled at the University of Southern Mississippi. He also attended summer classes at Holmes Community College on the Goodman Campus in 1985 and 1986.

At the time of the tragedy, Ferguson was the director of the National Geographic Society Outreach. Ferguson leaves behind his mother, Barbara Harrell, who is a resident of Durant.

As students at Holmes Community College, we share a common bond with these two men. Their Christian attitudes and many achievements will be remembered by students, faculty, friends and family. Both men have left a proud legacy that will linger for many years at Holmes Community College.

Above. Students, faculty and staff gather in the Grove on the Goodman Campus for the prayer service following the September 11 tragedy. Similar services were also held on the Ridgeland Campus and at the Grenada Center.

Left. Ridgeland Campus sophomore Christy Allen returns to her normal study habits as the entire country strives to take President George W. Bush's advice to continue their lives as before September 11, 2001, in his speech to the nation following the tragedy.

PINK FLUFF,

IT'S A:

by Christy Burrell

With styles ranging from plain white sheets to leopard print curtains, Holmes Community College girls are proving that they are about more than just flowers and pink fluff.

Director of Housing Terry Fancher said that he has seen everything from Christmas lights strung up to checker board walls, even though painting is strictly forbidden.

While some girls chose to work with the furnishings supplied, many brought rugs, curtains, chairs, couches, or bookshelves to add that special touch.

Of course, there are students who treat their dorm like giant walk-in lockers but for students like freshman Shemera O'Neal it is something more.

"It is supposed to be like home," said O'Neal.

Some roommates such as sophomores Jamie Hill and Dee Dee Killebrew chose to decorate each side an almost mirror image of the other.

Others like Delana Denton and Tina Borders each displayed their own style.

"Tina was already there so I just moved my stuff in," said Denton.

Lexington native Lakeita Horton said that she is "crazy about the color blue" so of course she bought blue sheets and on moving day her roommate just happened to show up with coordinating sheets.

Most girls expressed a desire to be able to paint the off-white walls. To keep the hospital feeling out, girls filled the walls with pictures, signs, magazine clippings, posters and just about anything else they could get their hands on.

Female students had their choice of three dormitories: Grenada Hall, Yazoo Hall, and Choctaw Hall. Grenada Hall was under the supervision of Pauline Scott and was known as the oldest, with a more home-like feel.

Yazoo Hall, supervised by Doris Jones, featured suite bathrooms that could be fixed up by compromising suite mates.

The newest dorm, under Eloise Avery's supervision, was Choctaw Hall. It was a state-of-the-art building that looked great to begin with.

Whatever your style, decorating your dorm room could help ease the transition to the world of college.

Choctaw Hall residents Rachel Parnell and Sara DuBard find a CD to listen to as they get ready to meet some friends.

Holmes Ambassador Crystal Alford makes time to read a good book in Choctaw Hall.

DANCE PARTY

by Tara Rosenberg, Co-Editor

Homecoming week, the busiest and most fun time of the semester, was packed with exciting traditional activities for all of Holmes Community College.

The cheerleaders selected a theme for each day, which students followed with their choice of clothing. On Monday, "God Bless America Day," students proudly displayed their stars and stripes as a tribute to the country.

On Tuesday, students wore all black for "Death to Delta Day." On "Hunt Down the Trojans Day," students wore either camouflage or animal print.

On Thursday, students donned disco party or tie-dyed outfits for "Dance over the Trojans Day." Everyone enjoyed wearing their homecoming T-shirts on Friday.

Starting off the week was Monday Night Madness, which gives basketball fans the chance to meet the Bulldogs.

One of the most popular homecoming traditions, Sidewalk Cafe was sponsored by Phi Theta Kappa, VICA and the Art Department. Held during activity period on Thursday, the event raised a record total of over $500 through the selling of baked goods.

"It was the most memorable activity besides the game. I liked that the money raised went to the American Red Cross," said Jodie Kirk, a freshman liberal arts major from Winona.

The talented members of the Steel Band as well as Dan Townsend/Chris Davis duo and PTK adviser Steve Deaton provided entertainment at Sidewalk Cafe.

The Thursday night homecoming activities, which included the pep rally, parade and dance, had good participation, but the crowds did not stay long.

The fans returned, though, on game day and the attendance was booming at the pep rally held in the Grove.

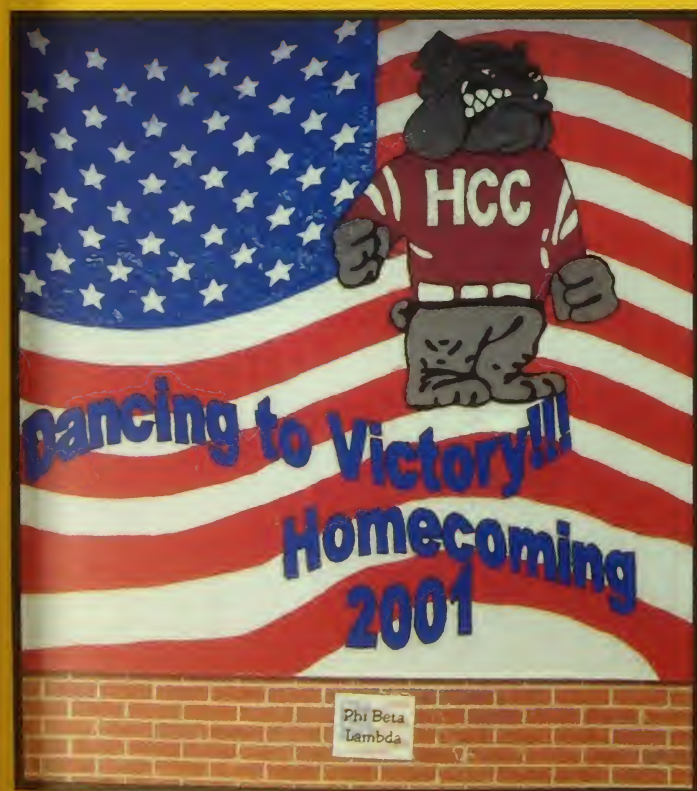

"It was the best pep rally we ever did," said Matt Sample, a freshman cheerleader from Kosciusko. "Plus, we had a really good turnout for the game. I was glad to get support from the students, faculty and staff."

When comparing the overall spirit of students during homecoming week to that at universities, business administration instructor and cheerleader sponsor Audra Kimble said, "I've tried a lot in my 10 years of being cheerleader sponsor to get students involved. It's just not a life-long connection at two-year schools as it is at universities."

Many people follow university teams from infancy to adulthood. The community college is sometimes viewed as only a period of transition, from high school to university. This attitude, however, can cause people to miss out on so much that is going on right before their eyes and homecoming week at Holmes Community College is definitely not the week to miss.

Homecoming 2001 was exceptional this year. Everyone's performances went as planned and the Bulldog supporters really enjoyed the day. I spoke to many members of each individual group involved in homecoming and learned just how much preparation was required.

Everyone who performed on homecoming day practiced two hours or more each day during the weeks prior to homecoming.

Football team member Eddie Ledger of Grenada said, "We were not actually under more stress than usual. Monday and Tuesday were the real workdays and Wednesday was a walk-through of the game plan."

The team as a whole worked very hard and dedicated themselves all week to be ready for the game against Mississippi Delta Community College.

The cheerleaders were right beside the football players all the way. They also practiced two or three hours each day—perfecting stunts, pyramids and cheers. The bulldog cheerleaders were under more pressure than they normally are to make everything exactly right.

Candi Cockroft, a cheerleader from Kosciusko, said that the team was definitely prepared for the game.

"Not only were we ready but we grew a lot closer as a team and we did not worry about petty comments from others. We had to learn that we cannot take everything so personally and to just have fun with it."

Other groups such as the Bulldog Band and The Holmes Connection! were also well-prepared. They both rehearsed at least two hours each day or however long it took until their routine was flawless. The Holmes Connection! performed an outstanding swing dance number and the Jazz and Steel bands played their music in the Grove the afternoon of the homecoming game. The band's halftime show featured pieces from the group "Chicago." Their performances showed just how prepared they were and how much work was put into their shows.

The homecoming court was well prepared for the halftime ceremony. The members of the court practiced with their escorts on the football field during homecoming week. Goodman Campus Student Body Maid Bobbie Rigby said she was very proud to serve on the Holmes homecoming court.

"Being selected made me realize how many friends I actually have. It was a great experience," said Rigby.

Rebecca Blissard, a freshman from Houston, sang the national anthem. She practiced every day with vocal music instructor Dr. Kathy King. Rebecca was a member of The Holmes Connection! and the Holmes Community College Chorale.

The hard work, time and effort of motivated students and inspiring coaches and directors brought the greatly-anticipated event to fruition.

GAME DAY

by Liz Tucker

Homecoming day was filled with various activities and much emotion. Holmes Community College welcomed alumni and friends of the college as well as parents, siblings and friends of students who came to show their support.

The Steel Drum Band and the Jazz Band provided entertainment while guests enjoyed a catfish dinner in the Grove. Games were also set up to delight the children. After lunch, The Holmes Connection! performed in McDaniel Hall Auditorium.

In keeping with tradition, a pep rally was held in the Grove before the football game. Cheerleaders boosted school spirit with cheers, chants and stunts. The alumni award recipients and the Sports Hall of Fame inductees were recognized on the sidelines immediately before freshman Rebecca Blissard sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

During halftime, the musicians, Dazzlers, color guard and drum majors of the Bulldog Band performed their field show, which featured songs of the group "Chicago."

Following the band's performance, the homecoming court was presented and the homecoming queen, Angela Evans, was crowned by Dr. Starkey A. Morgan Sr., president of Holmes Community College. Alumni Association officers assisted with the queen's robe and scepter.

Homecoming festivities culminated with the football game against Mississippi Delta Community College.

The Bulldogs got on the board first, with a touchdown pass from quarterback Chuck Darbonne to wide receiver Reginald Haralson. Matt Jones scored the extra point. However, Mississippi Delta scored three unanswered touchdowns and the game ended 21-7.

WINTER FORMAL

Keeping the Tradition Alive

by Jennifer Smith, Co-Editor

Beautiful decorations, refreshments, music and students crowding the dance floor were all part of the Holmes Community College Winter Formal. With the theme, "Walking in a Winter Wonderland," the Student Government Association sponsored the second annual winter formal.

The plans for this event were made a few months in advance. SGA members decorated the Canteen with wonderful colors of red, green, blue and white. Also, for students' enjoyment, cake and punch were served as refreshments.

As with the previous year, Susie Sounds Disc Jockey was selected to take care of the music. Matt Cauthen, a sophomore from Kosciusko, said that there was a nice variety of music that everyone seemed to enjoy.

The clothing for the evening ranged from prom dresses to blue jeans.

From the soul train line to Y.M.C.A., students had a great time showing off their dance moves.

"People enjoyed the food, music and the chance to mingle with one another," said Christi Shumaker, a freshman from Eupora. "It was an event that pulled people together."

Of course, dancing was the highlight of the night, but it was dancing with friends that will be remembered most.

SGA member Chrissy Sudduth said she believes this is a tradition that should be continued.

"At the winter formal, I had a lot of fun with friends, enjoyed the music and had a great time dancing," said Sudduth.

Beautiful decorations, refreshments, music and students crowding the dance floor—it was a perfect ending for a fun-filled event.

PARADE OF BEAUTIES

by Tara Rosenberg, Co-Editor

Just following the September 11 national tragedy, Angie Blain and Ceresa Sims, directors of the Holmes Community College Parade of Beauties, began working with the theme, "American Beauties: A Night to Shine," for the event, which is an autumnal tradition at Holmes. With the help of numerous students, faculty and staff from the Goodman Campus, the stage decorations beautifully exhibited this patriotic theme.

For most of the girls competing, preparations began about a month before the event—choosing dresses, borrowing jewelry and getting hairdo ideas. When the day arrived, all 31 contestants from the three campuses of Holmes began the competition with afternoon interviews given by the judges.

"This was my favorite part of competing because they asked me questions about my major—about things that I have never really thought about before," said Anna Black, a sophomore from McCool. "They talk to you as a person and not just a contestant."

Following the interview portion of the judging process, the Parade of Beauties was soon to begin.

"I went to the gym, slipped into my dress, did a few touchups and the show was on," said Alicia Kirk, a freshman beauty from Benton.

Lola Cagle, a Kosciusko resident, provided the evening's entertainment. She opened the program by singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and performed other selections throughout the program.

During the evening gown competition, the contestants were scored on poise/appearance and beauty. The contestants with the 10 highest scores moved on to the second round of competition. All previous scores were eliminated and the contestants were judged in a final evening gown competition, solely on beauty and poise/appearance. Most Beautiful and the four beauties were then selected according to the scores from the second round.

"I was shocked and excited when I was crowned. Last year, I was really nervous and I did not do well. This year, I was out there having fun," said Darrah Johnson, 2001 Most Beautiful.

Many of the contestants carried the tradition of competing in beauty reviews from high school. Jennifer Sanders, a sophomore from Ackerman, has quite a list of traditions in her long line of pageant competitions.

"I've worn the same shoes in every pageant that I've been in since high school. My best friend has always sent me a bouquet of daisies and I wear the same color of lipstick in the pageants," said Sanders.

Master of Ceremonies Bill Watkins enjoyed the experience.

"I would do it again in a minute. I've always wanted to do one. Plus, I was First Runner-Up in the M.C. Pageant," said Watkins, who is also an art instructor on the Goodman Campus.

Watkins met the contestants during rehearsal on Sunday afternoon prior to the pageant.

"I got to meet the girls with them in their jeans. They showed me how real they are, not just pretty," said Watkins.

MORE THAN JUST CAMOUFLAGE, IT'S A: GUY THING

by Christy Burrell

Most men thought deer horns, camouflage and just one pile of dirty socks was close enough to Martha Stewart for them. At least some of Holmes guys managed to get it together....without mom.

While most men on campus are not exactly interior decorating majors, they, as sophomore Chris Davis said, "decorated according to our own taste."

For some guys, that meant the works and for others, barely throwing a sheet across the bed was homey enough for them.

Director of Housing Terry Fancher admitted the guys were allowed to decorate any way they wanted as long as it was "decent and not permanent."

The dorm guys brought pictures, posters and even lights to cover the barren walls. Like their fellow female students, they would do anything not to stare at an empty wall.

Computer and electrical engineering major Bill Michaels said he "hung up a huge canvas sheet with Titan AE on it."

Some guys just did what was expected of them and used their room as a giant laundry basket.

As English major Chris Davis put it, "The closets are orange. What matches orange?"

Freshman Attala Hall resident Keith Patrick was rumored to have the coolest room with lights strung up everywhere. As Bill Michaels said, "It's like party central."

HCC's male students had three dorms to choose from: Attala, Kelly Gene Cook and Motel. The residents were under the supervision of Mark Deason and Hubert Robertson, who said the guys were "definitely original."

No matter what their choice was, the guys proved that girls were not the only ones who knew their stuff.

TRADITIONS & TRANSITIONS

ORGANIZATIONS

Here's the "how-to" on getting involved at Holmes Community College

by Linda Howell

The 2001-02 school year at Holmes Community College offered numerous opportunities for students to become involved in campus organizations. Getting involved helped students to broaden their horizons, reinforce what they learned in class and meet new people.

The Creative Arts Club provides students interested in writing, art, music, poetry, and drama, an opportunity to meet, discuss, and share works in progress. English instructor Steve Deaton serves as the group's adviser.

A sophomore from Yazoo City, Bre Davis, president of the Creative Arts Club, said, "I enjoy being around people who share my same interests." She also stated that she likes this club because she can express herself without judgment.

One of the Creative Arts Club's primary activities was the coffeehouse, which took place at least once a semester. The club met on the third Tuesday of every month. Student members also participated in the creative writing competition. The winning entries were published in the creative writing journal, "Reflections," and were also submitted to the Mississippi Community College Creative Writing Association Competition. Winners of the state competition received scholarship money and had their work published in the community college writing journal. Students also attended conferences and heard professional writers speak.

Phi Beta Lambda was organized to promote business leadership and to create interest and understanding in the intelligent choice of business occupations. With membership open to all students enrolled in one or more business subjects, including business law, accounting, economics, statistics, business, and office and related technology programs. The club's advisers were business and office technology instructors Jenny Jones, Lynda Irby and Judy Smith.

The national drama fraternity in community colleges, Delta Psi Omega was organized to give special recognition to those students who have made outstanding contributions to drama and promote the dramatic arts. Students who completed the required number of working hours in drama were eligible to join.

Holmes offered a vast array of extracurricular activities on all three campuses. Whether in groups related to their major, or the arts, or religion, or academic achievements, students found others who shared their interests and got involved.

COMMITMENT

Holmes students devote time & effort to campus clubs

by Jennifer Smith, Co-Editor

As the year progressed, clubs played an important role in the lives of students. There was a wide variety of clubs which addressed an array of interests.

Every student could find a group suited to their particular tastes to join. However, for many students, just being a member was not enough. As students became involved in clubs, they realized it took dedication and devotion to get the most out of the organizations they joined.

"Volunteering and showing up for meetings in a timely manner shows dedication to the development and success of a club," said Linda Alexander, a counselor on the Goodman Campus and adviser for the Future Educators of America.

As officers and members work together and fulfill their obligation, clubs became successful and organized. Daniel Townsend, a freshman from Kosciusko, indicated that a member could demonstrate his or her dedication by making people more aware of activities that were going on around campus.

Not only did great members make great clubs, but advisers also play an important role in any organization. Advisers can have a huge impact on a student's life with their encouragement and support.

A pre-med major from Kosciusko, Laurie Warrington attributes her dedication to Phi Theta Kappa from the inspiration given by Julia Williams and Steve Deaton, advisers of the organization.

"Mrs. Williams and Mr. Deaton are there for any member, give everything they have to the club and really enjoy what they do," said Warrington.

No matter what the interest, Holmes Community College offered a variety of clubs to hold every talent's interest.

Bulldog musicians divided their time around class to perform in the marching band, which performs at halftime during the football season. Many of these marching band members also perform with either the Jazz band or one of the steel drum bands.

The Jazz band and steel drum bands make appearances at different functions throughout the year. Goodman Campus sophomore, Kayla Rains, said, "Steel band can be tricky at first, but it is a lot of fun once you get the hang of it."

For the creative side of Bulldog students, the Creative Arts Club presented at least one Coffeehouse each semester. Goodman Campus adviser Steve Deaton described it as "an open forum for student creativity."

The club also sponsors the creative writing contest and is responsible for the annual publication "Reflections." Members attend conferences every Spring.

According to Eddie Ellis, one of the advisers for VICA, the club was "made to promote skill level programs." VICA members, which include all vocational and technical students, raise money by selling raffle tickets and running the concession stand at football games.

The club members attend a state skills and leadership conference every year. Ellis stated that the members "do as much public service as possible."

Many other programs were offered on each of Holmes' three campuses, giving students a great opportunity to develop leadership skills and to have a little fun along the way.

Dazzler members (l-r) Jennifer Smith, Shelly Henson, Madeline Vidal, and Sakena Miles pump up the crowd during the halftime performance.

FOOTBALL PLAYERS SHOW HOW SPORT IS PLAYED

by Liz Tucker

A demanding and strenuous sport on any level, football was all about learning plays and listening to the coaches' directions. This was true for the players in high school and at Holmes.

Several football players agreed that college football was more difficult than high school football. The coaches were tougher, louder and more demanding. The coaching staff expected the best out of every player and players had to work for their success.

Compared to high school practices, the practice sessions at Holmes were much longer. In addition, the season began earlier with workouts, training and boot camp.

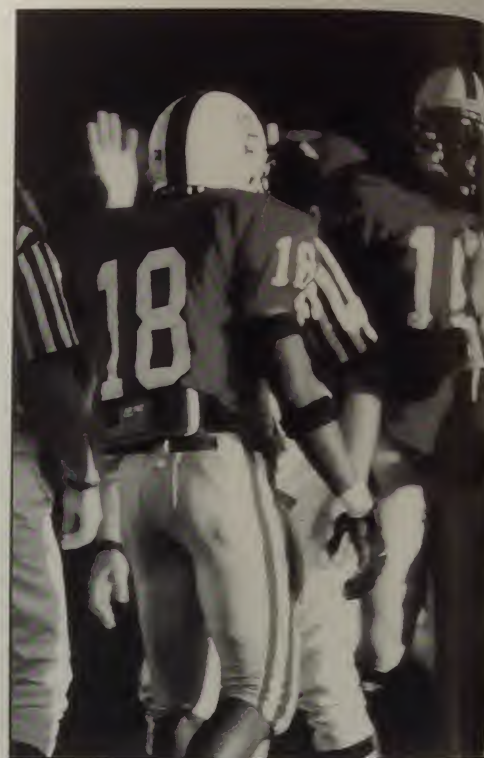

Weightlifting was mandatory in both high school and at Holmes. However, at Holmes, more was expected of the players during weightlifting. The team members were expected to lift greater amounts of weight and to continue improving.

Each player rose to the challenge of playing on the community college level as they lined up on the field each week.

The Bulldogs got off to a rocky start but ended the season with a strong finish. The team closed the season with three victories, beating East Mississippi, Coahoma and Northeast in its final three games. An earlier win over Itawamba gave the Bulldogs four wins in a nine-game season.

All the community colleges in the state shortened their schedules from 10 games to a nine-game schedule because of budget constraints.

CHEERLEADERS COME TOGETHER FOR A YEAR OF BULLDOG SPIRIT

Cheerleaders of today are more than just pompoms, cheesy grins, and megaphones. It takes a finely tuned athlete to handle what these young men and women are put through.

While most college students were enjoying their summer vacation, the Bulldog cheerleaders were busy practicing twice a week. Under the direction of Audra Love Kimble, business administration instructor and cheerleader sponsor, the cheerleaders went to camp in late July at the University of Alabama.

Lindsay Putt, a very accomplished cheerleader with only one year of cheering behind her, said, "It's been a lot of fun to get to know everybody. We really learned a lot at camp." Fellow squad member Brian Powers agreed with her but added, "Camp was rough."

During the fall season, the cheerleaders were occupied with preparing for pep rallies, football games and home basketball games, which meant the cheerleaders found themselves practicing as many as four or five times a week.

Freshman cheerleader Matt Sample said, "It has been a great opportunity to stay in shape all year long."

Although Mr. and Miss Bully do not require a large number of practice hours, they do require a great deal of maintenance.

The suits must be washed, air dried, brushed, and if necessary, doused with Febreeze. Both mascots agreed that it was a lot of fun, and Josh Battles, during his first year to ever mascot, quoted, "We're getting a scholarship to act like idiots."

The squad consists of seven couples which include Jamie Hill and Tate Pepper; Amber Rivers and Brian Powers; Matt Sample and Alicia Kirk; Cliff Cosnahan and Candi Cockroft; Natalie Woods and John Faulkenberry; Josh Vaughan and Cathryn Pope; and Michael Summerlin and Lindsay Putt.

Rounding out the squad are the mascots for the year, Josh Battles (Mr. Bully) and Christy Burrell (Ms. Bully). Greg Morgan, the manager, spent countless hours running errands, loading and unloading equipment, and keeping everything within reach during road games.

So maybe the pompoms, cheesy grins and megaphones were there, but so was a lot of work behind them.

'More than team play'

SOCCER PLAYERS RECEIVE BENEFITS OF THE SPORT

by Tara Rosenberg & Jennifer Smith, Co-Editors

To play or not to play: that was the question. For many soccer players, though, there was no question about it. Playing was not an option; it was a necessity, for both the scholarship and love of the game.

The advantage of the sport was not just stepping on the field to play. It was about building physical endurance and transforming 11 people into one team.

"There is no 'I' in soccer. You have 11 people that have to work as a team to accomplish one goal," said Tyler Snapka, a freshman from Madison. "It's hard to have 11 people all functioning together. You have to get everyone going in the same direction."

The high level of difficulty and competition in the sport did not hinder the forming of friendships, on or off the field.

"I have a lot of good friends on the soccer team," said Lindsay Putt, a freshman from Kosciusko. "It's been a great way for me to meet people."

Advantages of playing college soccer stretched far beyond just receiving a scholarship. The sport taught teamwork, built friendships and kept even the biggest of couch-potatoes active.

 Region 23 Tournament

by Don Townsend

The men's basketball team at Holmes participated in a pre-game ritual before each game. The team gathered around the trophy in the dressing room and each team member then touched the trophy.

According to guard Roderick Patterson, this tradition was something that the entire team participated in. "It helps us to be serious and to stay focused," he said.

This ritual was seen, not as a good luck charm, but more of a reminder of what the team's ultimate goal was: a championship.

Touching the trophy was a reminder of the hard work and perseverance that is required to achieve excellence. It helped the team keep their eyes on the goal they were aiming for.

"It makes us want to work hard and earn the trophy," said Patterson.

And win the trophy they did! The Bulldogs finished their regular season with a 13-9 winning record. At the state tournament, they began their quest for the title by defeating Jones 84-73. Following this victory, they went on to defeat Southwest 66-64. Next came the championship game against Northwest, whom the Bulldogs handed a 96-89 defeat to bring the state trophy home to Goodman.

Holmes then advanced to the Region 23 Tournament, where they faced, and defeated, Jones once again. In the second round of the tournament, Holmes matched up against Itawamba. Holmes played ICC twice in the regular season, losing the first game and winning the second. In the tournament, Itawamba defeated the Bulldogs 60-68.

IT ALL COMES DOWN TO WINNING

by Dan Townsend

The women's basketball team began a very interesting tradition this year. Coach Chanda Rigby, who joined the Lady Bulldogs this fall, distributed popsicle sticks to each member on the team at the beginning of the season. She asked each player to write down on the stick what she wanted to contribute to the team, such as scoring, rebounding, defense, assists, etc. After each stick had been written upon, the team members took the sticks and tied them together with shoe strings. Throughout the course of the season, the team would always make a point to look at the sticks before each game. This served as a reminder of what each player wanted to contribute to the game. They even carry the sticks with them on road trips!

"I'm not a very superstitious person, so I don't like to think of the sticks as a good luck charm, but more of a symbol. The pile of sticks symbolizes how each member wants to serve the team," said Coach Rigby.

Jennifer Andrews, a point guard on the team, said, "We always pray as a team before every game."

Coach Rigby believed this tradition was beneficial to the team, but added, "We rest on God more so than our ritual with the sticks. Praying reminds us of our dependence upon God, and the sticks remind us of our own responsibility to work hard and stay focused."

'Step up to the Plate'

ROOKIES PROVE THEMSELVES WORTHY

by Amber Carter

There were many advantages and disadvantages to being on the baseball team. Although they consider themselves a family, the freshmen certainly needed more guidance than older players. New players had to prove themselves and be respectful to older, more experienced players to earn their place on the team.

One disadvantage for freshman members was cleaning up after practice. If there was a job to be done such as cutting and raking the field or picking up equipment, new players were the "lucky ones" who got the pleasure of these tasks. Doing these things was kind of like initiating them to the team. It also earned them respect from sophomore teammates and from the coach.

Not only did the freshmen have to do the dirty work, but they also had to learn to adapt to a new environment.

"Starting college level baseball is like beginning little league. You are surrounded by a whole new environment. The rookies have to become accustomed to the new people and more importantly new coaches with different rules and demands," said Mark Grogan, a freshman from Flora.

Another small disadvantage was the longer practices. College league practices were more intense and more focused than what high school students are usually accustomed to.

"You just have to get out there and play as hard as you can and do what the coach tells you to do. That's the only way to prove yourself to the team," said freshman Josh Reagan.

There were also many advantages to being a baseball player, such as getting to eat as much food as they wanted and the team spent most of their "quality time" with each other eating in the cafeteria.

The team as a whole had a very respectable reputation. It presented itself well and the members were more than willing to help anyone. Coach Dupont was also a great asset to the team.

They practiced hard but also liked to have a little fun. Jason Fields shared a story about Keith Fagan, a sophomore on the team, when he slid right through second base in his boxer shorts.

"It was probably the most memorable experience yet," said Fields.

The baseball players all agreed that, despite working hard during practice, being on the team was a great learning experience that taught work ethics and sportsmanship. The guys all agreed that the hard work and effort put into the sport was well worth the respect and honor of being a part of the team.

Freshman player Grover Allen prepares to throw a strike in the alumni baseball game held during homecoming activities.

Freshman Josh Reagan cheers on his teammates after he slides safely to third base.

'Not Just a Game'

SOFTBALL PLAYERS FIND OUT WHAT GAME IS ABOUT

by Linda Howell

The transition from high school softball to college softball can be difficult, but was attainable. With new aspects and difficulties of the game, the Holmes softball girls were able to adapt.

For example, girls coming from high school had to adapt to new players as well as playing new positions.

Sophomore ball player Jessica Brown said, "Coach Edwards is open-minded to suggestions whereas in high school it was 'do what you're told.'"

The girls also realized that in high school they were the best on the team and here they are equal to the other players. As sophomore ball player Mary McMullin said,

"College players are more competitive and want to excel in the next level."

Compared to high school players, college players were more apt to make a mistake and shrug it off rather than let it put them in a slump for the rest of the game. As expected, the practices for college were longer, harder, and more intense. Sophomore player Ashley Luby said, "In college there is more conditioning which entails more intense running than in high school."

Last year, the Lady Bulldogs made the transition from slow pitch to fast pitch. Assistant coach Terry Fancher said, "Fast pitch is a lot like baseball and takes a certain type of ball player to get the job done."

The team members had to be more on their toes and in tune at all times during the game. The players also had to be able to think quickly on their feet and think ahead on every play. The reaction time of the players also must be quicker. Intelligence plays an important part as well. The fast pitch players had to not only prepare physically, but also mentally. The players had six weeks of practice in the fall. The girls must have morale intensity and keep in good spirits and motivate the other players. Fundamentals are also important in the game; if they have not mastered the basics, they will struggle. There was a small percentage of fast pitch in high school. If current trends continue, slow pitch softball may be a thing of the past in college athletics.

The Holmes softball girls worked hard and had to go through many changes and make different adjustments and adaptations.

RITUALS SWING SPORT INTO DEEPER MEANING

by David Holotanko

Men's basketball coach Todd Kimble continued a new tradition this year by returning as the Holmes golf team coach for the second straight year.

Like the teammates' techniques, Kimble's coaching methods varied from sport to sport.

According to Kimble, "Golf is less hands-on and more of a mental game."

Holmes golfers practice mostly on an independent basis throughout the year. In the spring, the team practices several times a week in preparation for their upcoming tournaments.

"Athletic ability does not get you through golf as it would in other sports," said Kimble. The golfers must practice to improve on their skills through training and by observing others.

Because of the large mental aspect involved in golf, the players relied less on the coach and more on their own concentration.

While the Holmes golf team was small, they definitely continued the Holmes tradition of winning.

TENNIS TEAM STICKS

WITH WHAT WORKS

by Jennifer Smith

Goodman Campus tennis team member Leslie Bierstine returns the ball as she practices for a match.

For eight individuals on the Goodman Campus of Holmes Community College, the beginning of February means bringing out the tennis rackets and working on serves. It is a time for practice, conditioning and the start of a new tennis season. As the spring semester begins, the tennis team works very hard toward the goal of a winning season.

Under the coaching of Andy Wood, the Holmes tennis team can be found practicing Monday through Thursday for almost two hours. Each practice consists of drills, running and playing scrimmage games against one another. The team focuses on improving skills and preparing for matches.

Although traditions are not captivating the court for the tennis team, there are a few that will stick around. Philip Pickle, a sophomore from Kosciusko, said, "We always say the Lord's Prayer before a game—it's a tradition."

One tradition that Coach Wood would like to keep around is playing with class. "Whether winning or losing, I would like to represent Holmes in a way that it should be represented and play with class," said Wood.

Another tradition the tennis team can depend on is leadership qualities and attitudes of the players. Coach Wood said that the attitudes are different from year to year but are always positive. Wood also commented that the sophomores have stepped up and taken "great leadership roles."

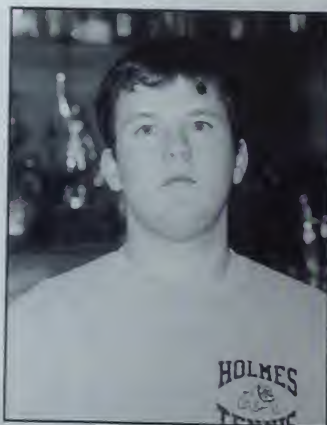

This year's tennis team consist of two women and six men. They are Leslie Bierstine, Angela Ramage, Russell Casteel, Philip Pickle, Breck Richardson, Cliff Cosnahan, Greg Morgan and Mitch Waggener.

INTRAMURALS OFFER OPTIONS FOR THOSE WITH TIME, ENERGY

by Andrea Holotanko

Headed by Coach Ed Rigby, Holmes offered several intramural sports this year, including basketball, volleyball, tennis, flag-football and co-ed softball.

While tennis and basketball were offered during first semester, volleyball, flag-football and co-ed softball were offered during second semester. Each season lasted from four to five weeks in which tournaments were held. The winners of each sport received T-shirts.

In basketball, team names were chosen after professional basketball teams, while in tennis, there were no team names. In volleyball, however, there were names such as "Snapka," which was the last name of one of the players and "601," the name of one of the participant's clothing company. "The Patrol" was a team name which came from a logo on a T-shirt and there were also the "Hog Troughs."

The formation of teams was a very informal process. Coach Rigby said that people for the most part chose their own teams. At first, each team got a chance to play one another. Then, a tournament was set up where each team had a specific time to play and specific teams to play.

ment were Angela Ramage and Leslie Bierstine. The winners of the men's tournament were Breck Richardson and Russell Casteel.

Many people signed up for intramural sports just to have fun. Zavien Rivers, a student of the Goodman Campus, played intramural basketball and volleyball. He said that he had fun playing and he got to meet new people.

Goodman Campus student Justin Cornette played volleyball. "I like playing volleyball but since the school doesn't have an organized team, intramural volleyball is the way to go," said Cornette.

Alicia Kirk said that intramural volleyball gave her something to do and it allowed her to spend more time with some of her friends.

Intramural sports gave Holmes Community College students a chance to hang out with friends and have fun at the same time.

The most important transition that has occurred is the amount of opportunity that has been presented to me. In high school, I never dreamed that I would have so much opportunity. It has given me a renewed sense that I can do what it is that I wish to do in life.

HOW DID YOU MAKE THE TRANSITION FROM HIGH SCHOOL TO COLLEGE?

As a married mother of two young children, college presents a new and exciting challenge in my life. The transition has not been easy, but the rewards of a college education make it all worthwhile. In addition to my new role as a student, I also enjoy community service as a volunteer adult literacy tutor.

WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE HOLIDAY TRADITION?

My favorite holiday is probably Christmas and I enjoy all the traditions that come with it. It's a time where families can get together and enjoy this time spent together while reflecting on previous occasions. It's also the most important holiday to me because it symbolizes the day on which our Saviour Christ Jesus was born through whom we can all have eternal life. I also enjoy the Christmas Carols which are sung and passed down through the years. Merry Christmas!

WHAT ARE SOME OF THE MORE CHALLENGING TRANSITIONS YOU HAVE FACED?

As a forty-eight year old woman that has many family, employment and community activities, I have found the balancing of my time to be a major transition.

I thought that being a non-traditional student (of great age!) would be difficult, however, the student body has been very accepting of me and the teachers have given me the support and direction I needed to succeed at Holmes.

HOW HAS LIVING IN AN APARTMENT BEEN A TRANSITION FROM LIVING AT HOME?

You have so many responsibilities. Momma isn't there to stand over you and tell you what to do or how to do it. You have to get up on your own and do your homework and housework on your own. Also, if you forget something then it's your fault, no one else's. Plus, money is tighter. I can't shop as much as I used to, nor do I sleep as much. Life is completely different.

HOW DID YOU MAKE THE TRANSITION FROM HIGH SCHOOL TO COLLEGE?

I made the transition very painfully, with great wailing and gnashing of teeth. The college experience, itself, however, has not been as painful as the transition to it. I haven't gnashed my teeth but coughing from the second-hand smoke has become commonplace. It's worth it, though, because, God forbid, I've had fun here!

HOW HAS LIVING IN A HOUSE OF YOUR OWN BEEN A TRANSITION FROM LIVING AT HOME?

It was a little scary at first. Especially when you have little ones of your own. But I really enjoy having something that I can call my own. By putting God first in everything you do, you can overcome any tasks or triumphs that comes your way. But you have to be strong and have faith.

TRADITIONS & TRANSITIONS

STUDENTS MAKE MEMORIES WHILE EXPERIENCING OPPORTUNITIES HOLMES OFFERS

Billy Wilson, from Phi Theta Kappa International Headquarters, gives a lecture to the Honors Forum class.

Mascot Josh Battles, a.k.a. Bully, waves the Holmes flag on the football field during a home game.

Angelic voices floated from the Fine Arts Building; beautiful Caribbean music drifted from the Band Hall; the coliseum was packed with screaming Bulldog fans; and it was just another day for Goodman Campus students.

While each campus had its own claim to uniqueness, they were all in transition. As the enrollment grew each year, the college continued to expand. The ongoing construction efforts continued to open up new possibilities and opportunities every year.

Holmes became a part of every student and helped to prepare him or her for the world. Both traditional and non-traditional students felt comfortable in an environment where the faculty and staff were so caring. "The strong point of Holmes has always been the quality of its instructors," said Director of Admissions and Records Gene Richardson.

Whether the student was a genius, a jock, craved stage life, or a little of all three, Holmes was the place to be. With such a variety, students were allowed to be as involved with campus life as they wanted to be.

Holmes offered many exciting classes which ranged from academic classes, such as American National Government, to technical programs, like business and office technology, to vocational programs such as cosmetology. No matter what type the student chose, almost all included some type of hands-on experience. These experiences often lead to important career choices.

"Mr. Deaton, Goodman Campus English instructor, has had the most profound influence on my writing career," said sophomore Bre' Davis.

Students who chose to involve sports in their schedule had a great way to keep in shape while forming life-long friendships. Holmes offered a sport for many different types of athletes such as baseball, basketball, cheerleading, football, track, tennis, softball, soccer and even golf. Bulldog fans turned out in outstanding numbers to support each sport.

If the spotlight called a student, then he or she had plenty of opportunities to shine. The Holmes Connection! and Chorale gave vocally talented students a chance to share their gifts with the college and its supporting district. Bands offered at Holmes included marching, jazz, concert and steel drum bands. The drama department held auditions and performances every semester.

No matter what the student's interests, each one built experiences that will last a lifetime which, for freshman Audrey Philliber, was very important.

"This has been the most interesting year ever spent at Holmes because of the uniqueness and variety of problems that came up this year; they were unlike anything we had ever encountered," said Richardson.

This year will probably always be known as the year of the September 11 tragedy. While the terrorists meant to drive our nation apart, they only brought us closer.

"We are starting to see each other more as Americans than just different colors and cultures. Our college has become more unified," said Goodman Campus psychology instructor Lindy McCain.

Whether the students hit the books or the courts, this year was full of memories that will be with each and every student throughout life. Every single memory proved there was no place like Holmes.

EDITOR'S LETTER

The 2001-2002 "Horizons" staff experience has been unbelievable! Throughout the year, we have learned many new faces and have gained friendships through interviews and annual staff responsibilities. Being members of the Horizons annual staff has taught each of us how to manage our time and how to work together efficiently.

There are many people who have helped to make this yearbook possible. We would first like to thank God for giving us the opportunity to work together and become such good friends. Yearbook sponsor Caron Blanton has helped us tremendously and has been a superb role model. She encouraged us when it seemed nothing was going right, devoted her time regardless of the situation, and gave us advice on even the smallest of decisions. We are grateful for the help of Nan Sykes and Jim Williams, as well as everyone who agreed to last-minute interviews and pictures. We appreciate the dedication of the staff members and the time and energy that was put forth in creating this masterpiece of memories.

Despite the many hours of hard work, we still made time for fun—the scavenger hunt (in which no one could find a Holmes umbrella), the trip to Olive Garden and passing "The Griswald's" on the way to Mrs. Blanton's house, and the late-night run to Walgreen's to develop pictures for the next day's layouts. We cannot forget the mouth-watering cheesecakes made especially for the staff by Mrs. Blanton—often times a reward for our dedication.

The cooperation of the entire Holmes faculty, staff, and student body enhanced the staff's ability to produce this wonderful "Horizons" volume. We hope you enjoy this exploration of Holmes Community College traditions and transitions.
